

Medical Evaluations for Autism

All evaluation centers for a diagnosis of Autism require a referral through your child's primary doctor. A medical diagnosis is separate from an educational disability eligibility for a school IEP.

Augmentative and Alternative Communication (AAC) Apps

AAC is a term used to describe various methods of communication for people who have difficulty with or are unable to use spoken language. AAC can include pictures and/or text; there are many apps that can be used on cell phones and tablets. AAC can help people express their wants and needs and does not inhibit one from learning to speak. It is an excellent tool for both non-speaking and speaking individuals.

For resources on how to use AAC more effectively, visit <https://www.theaaccoach.com> or see the free downloads at <https://www.theaaccoach.com/free-downloads>.

CBoard (Android) Free	Proloquo2Go (iOS) $249.99	TouchChat (iOS) $299.99	Speech Assistant AAC (Android, iOS) Free	QuickTalk AAC (Android, iOS) Price varies
iCommunicate (iOS) $49.99	LetMeTalk (iOS) Free	SonoFlex (iOS) $99.99	CoughDrop (Android, iOS) Free	SymboTalk (Android, iOS) Free

Using AAC technology will be most beneficial when trained by a speech pathologist who is familiar with AAC devices. For help choosing which device and app is best for your family, request a speech and language evaluation. Therapy can provide the entire family with training.
